GIRLS' WEEK, 1931

(By Catherine Curran Smith)

Like violets shy and modest,
She is tender, loyal and true;
Like the Johnny-jump-up pansy
She has tender thoughts of you.

While the lilies-of-the-valley
Tell of her hidden love,
And the tall bloom of magnolia
Shed her fragrance high above.

When she bows her head in sorrow,
We think of the bleeding heart;
She will hand us a spray of forget-me-nots
If from us she is forced to part.

The rose reveals her beauty,
She comforts us with heart's ease;
The lily speaks of her purity,
She is graceful as sweet peas.

Take all the flowers of Springtime,
With their fragrance and their hue—
There is not a flower among them
Can compare, dear girls, to you.

In an uproarious manner did this day of the year for girls of Bristol and nearby sections start this morning.

Hundreds of keen-eyed, healthy and wide-awake girls, started the day with a vim, and are continuing as the day progresses and will until early evening, when tired but happy they will make their way to their homes, a hearty meal and bed.

Promptly at the appointed hour this morning the girls, some quite tiny, and others of all ages up to the late teens, buzzed in front of the Grand Theatre. The buzz continued until it reached what might have all the ear-marks of a roar as the groups, large and small, continued to arrive.

The fact that they were eager to enter and that they were very much alive was shown by the manner in which they entered the play-house. The "gate-keepers" gave up in despair, and as usual let the fair sex have its way.

Mrs. George Miller, chairman of the Girls' Week Committee, presided at the morning ceremonies at the Grand, where Manager Edward Lynn was the host.

A song by the large group was followed by salute to the flag. Five Girl Scouts, members of Edgely Troop, attired in their uniforms, acted as ushers.

The high lights of the program were the musical contests, participated in by pianists, vocalists, and those who are partial to string instruments.

Miss Winifred Tracy announced the numerous selections by girls from all wards of the borough; while the judges of the three contests from Temple University were: Miss Anna

Banquet Speaker Takes Motherhood As Subject

Motherhood and its meaning was brought before the 136 individuals attending the annual Mother and Daughter Banquet in the basement of the Bristol Presbyterian Church, last evening, by Mrs. Anna M. Bilkert, formerly of Bagdad.

The speaker who made her home in the Orient for some years told of what a challenge there is in fine motherhood today. The history of motherhood was reviewed, and a comparison made between mothers of the Orient and Occident.

Mrs. Charles Peet was toastmistress of the evening.

Included in the program were vocal numbers, quartet and solo selections; as well as readings.

The menu was prepared and served by the men of the church; and the decorations were likewise in charge of this group.

ONE DOUBLE PLAY

Bristol High's baseball nine defeated Morrisville in a close and hard-fought contest by the score of 7 to 6.

Fire started as the moundman for the local boys, but ragged support sent him up into the air and he was relieved in the fifth inning by Hart. Seltzer hurled for the Yellow and Blue.

A double play by the Morrisville nine in the sixth inning was the feature of the game.

Bristol forged into the lead in the first inning and except for a momentary spell in the sixth and seventh innings, the crowd was never in doubt as to who the real winners would be.

Tuesday, the local boys play Langhorne at home.

FIND LARGE STILL ON FALLS FARM; MAN UNDER BAIL

State Police and County Detective Raid Loubach Place

20,000 GALLONS OF MASH

Still Dismantled and Alleged Alcohol Taken To Doylestown

A large still was discovered on the premises of the Loubach Farm, Falls Township, yesterday afternoon, when State Police from the Morrisville barracks in company with County Detective Anthony Russo, conducted a raid there. The officers unearthed about 20,000 gallons of mash, and approximately 200 gallons of alleged alcohol, large quantities of sugar and coke.

One man was taken into custody, charged with being in possession of the still. The allegation is denied.

The arrested gives the name of John Piotroselle, who was brought to the police station, here, pending a hearing.

The large quantity of alleged alcohol was shipped to Doylestown, and an analysis will be made. The still will be dismantled and the mash destroyed.

Troopers Stuart, Christ and Farrell, from the Morrisville station were included in the group.

When the officers visited the place at about 3.30 p. m., they found the raw materials and finished product. Piotroselle, who was on the premises, denies that he had charge of the plant.

Piotroselle was given a hearing last night before Justice Guy. He was charged with manufacture and possession and held in $1,000 bail for court.

Canal Trip Enjoyed By Members of Travel Club

A barge ride on the canal from New Hope to a point near Lumberville, visits to studios, homes and gardens in the New Hope artist colony, with delightful weather, made for a most enthusiastic program for 53 members and friends of the Bristol Travel Club yesterday.

The group of women, gathering in the morning at New Hope, found a large barge, drawn by mules, awaiting them. The program was not completed until early last evening and each minute brought something of interest forth.

One of the first places in the colony visited was the Davenport Shop, where a demonstration of weaving of rag rugs was given. The old looms were shown, where one day is required to weave a rug 27 by 54 inches. The Old Mill, where many paintings of the New Hope group of artists are hung, was also on the schedule; as well as the residence of William Lathrop, well-known artist, where the visitors viewed some of the Lathrop paintings, fine pieces of antique furniture, and a most gorgeous garden.

"The Gothic Shop," Mrs. Morgan Colt's place, occupied some time, wrought iron ware being there viewed. At "Bunny Brink" a stop was also made, where the blooms in the garden were admired.

This delightful journey marks the end of the Travel Club season.

GREENBURG, Pa.

The thrill that comes once in a lifetime came to Joseph Levandoski, Vandergrift constable, here.

The constable brought a prisoner here from Vandergrift. After delivering the prisoner, he missed his wallet, containing $200. Frantic search of his automobile, the county jail and his environs failed to locate the wallet.

Levandowski telephoned his wife to report his loss. And Mrs. Levandoski reported she had found the wallet at home.

"Boy," said the constable, "Those were the sweetest words I ever heard. I rose four feet in the air when I heard them."

CANDIDATES NOW HAVE LAST BIG OPPORTUNITY TO "CINCH" GOLD PRIZE OF THEIR CHOICE

Little More Than 24 Hours of Big Second Period Remain

A little more than 24 hours remain. In that short period candidates in The Courier's mammoth prize-giving event have their last opportunity of landing votes on the "double-quick" and literally cinching the prize they desire.

Never in this section has a race of any kind been so extremely close or so hotly contested. This fact has undoubtedly served to arouse the wonderful interest that is being taken throughout this section in the final dash for the wire. It is doubtful if there exists a single home in the community that is not vitally interested in the success of one of the favorites in the battle, and watching every gain with anxiety and eagerness, hoping and trusting that their choice may come under the wire first and be acclaimed the champion of champions—the proud winner of the $1,500.00 Bag of Gold.

BEG PARDON!

The subscription list of The Courier is steadily growing, and advertisers—both national and local—are quick to realize this splendid increase spells more prospective customers; the result is a larger paper. Yesterday, The Courier was hard pressed to accommodate the many progressive business firms seeking display in its columns, and the printers were equally hard pressed for time—eight pages crammed full of interesting advertising matter and late live news was the result, but in the last few minutes before going to press one of the compositors "picked up" the score board of candidates' standing, and instead of picking up the latest returns he inadvertently selected one used several weeks ago.

Just a "typographical" error, with accent on the typo. Beg pardon!

The corrected list appears in today's issue.

THE HUMAN ELEMENT

So important is the personal equation of high executives that financial-rating books may in the future adopt special notations to indicate the capacity of the men at the top. In many cases these men are so well known for their achievements that any newspaper reader might be trusted to give them a fair rating. Ford, Schwab, Owen D. Young, the late Judge Gary are outstanding examples of executives, in this class; but there are thousands of lesser leaders, men in high places, whose measure of genius is an unknown quantity to those who put money into the shares of their corporations. Annual reports may serve as rough-and-ready indications of their ability; but at best they tell only part of the story, and they do not always tell it in a version that may be taken at face value.

Balance sheets show tangible assets and liabilities to a penny. They even offer rough estimates as to such intangibles as the value of patents and goodwill, but they are silent as to the all-important factor of management. How, indeed, could they be otherwise? Who, for example, could appraise in dollars and cents the cash value of Henry Ford's business judgment, his ability for shaping sound policies, his technical knowledge and his practical experience? Or, having arrived at a correct valuation of these intangibles, who could guarantee, remembering the uncertainty of life, that these services would remain at the command of the corporation for the ensuing year, or even for the month to come?

Such reflections are a fresh reminder of the uncertainties of investment and industrial effort. Management of proved ability passes at an instant's notice into untried hands.

THE TIMID SOUL

For the sake of brief peace, the timid soul will dodge an issue and evade a responsibility, will let a lie live and an evil flourish. Of such weak stuff are most of us made, for which reason evil has too much of its own way in the world and crime flourishes in the neighborhood of lazy tolerance. The will to evil puts on a false front of strength, chiefly because the will to good lacks courage. For rare indeed is the sort of courage that will make no compromise and will count an honest fight as of more importance than its consequence.

It is a topsy-turvy world when evil seems stronger than good and delusions are allowed to live while good sense is afraid of a shadow. Our timid souls need courage—courage to declare the truth as we see it and to overthrow the dimly towers of sham courage to declare for the good and turn the daylight on evil. Timid souls may be content with the starveling peace they earn, but the decent destiny of the world lies in the hands of men who will fight for it.

Every now and then you see a man who could get more miles out of his car than in it.

Proof that distance lends enchantment: Sailors have a lower divorce rate than men of any other occupation.

A bake sale was conducted by the eighth grade of the Hulmeville public school yesterday.

Henry's Hall was well filled last evening when the Men's Club of the Church of the Redeemer, Andalusia, staged a minstrel show. The songs and jokes pleased old and young alike; and among the features was the demonstration given with a "mule," which "animal" was composed

She'd Thank Pryers to Keep Out

It's Her Business If Mate Beats Her, Says Wife Who Saved Him from Whipping Post

By WINIFRED BLACK

WAY down in Baltimore the other day, where they say, "u-all," and pronounce round, "ra-ound"—way down in Baltimore, where they eat terrapin, and soft shell crabs, and canvas-back ducks, just as we poor ordinary folks eat corned beef and cabbage—way down in Baltimore where everybody has a gr a n d father, and knows who he was, a n d where he came from, and who his grandfather was, too—well, what do you think?—way down in that blessed Baltimore they arrested a man for beating his wife, and in the genial Baltimore way they sentenced this man to a good horse-whipping, at the whipping post.

The man's relatives went to the Judge and begged for mercy, and chief among the relatives was—if you please—the woman the man had beaten.

It Was "Her Business"

She said she loved the man and she couldn't bear to have his pride hurt by a public whipping. She said she didn't have him arrested and would never have thought of such a thing.

It was the neighbors, the prying, busy-body neighbors who called in the police, and she'd thank them to mind their own business. If she wanted to take a beating from her husband she was going to take it. In spite of all the Paul Pry neighbors and fussy home folks on her side in the world.

It's true then—the old legend of the woman who likes to be beaten. I never really believed it myself—did you?

It always sounded like some weird tale of horror out of ancient days of ignorance and cruelty—but here it is right down in Baltimore.

So it said, however, that the name of the wife-beater shows very plainly that he had not lived in the State of Maryland very long.

The Woman's Fault!

I doubt if either he or his wife will live there very much longer. I don't believe that the Old Blue Hen's Chickens will ever get used to the idea of wife beating as a favorite indoor sport, do you?

No, I'm sorry for the woman who was beaten. The first time a man beats a woman—it is the man's fault. The second time the same man beats the same woman—it's the woman's fault. She deserves the beating for staying for one hour with such a man.

Maybe she deserved the beating—maybe she was sly, deceitful and bitter tongued, taunting—but in that case she wasn't worth the trouble of even a good hard slap, was she? And the fact that she would take a beating and forgive it doesn't appear to make her very much worthwhile either, does it?

But Maryland—of all places, Maryland, My Maryland—why they'll be burning witches at the stake in Richmond, Virginia, next.

CHAPTER XXXIII.
SCATTERING volley of shots met the roaring car as the gunmen on the ground scattered again from before the spinning wheels of the Hispano-Suiza. A single shot smashed its way through the soft fabric of the right front tire. For an instant Talbot thought the car would turn turtle, but Gerry's expert hands fought the wheel and conquered it. A running man threw himself headlong out of the way just as the front bumper flicked his body. By the slightest twist of the wheel Gerry could have run him down. Instead, he turned the reeling car toward another who had stopped to fire.

When Seconds Count.
The sharp tac-tac-tac of a machine gun ripped through the noises of the night. But there was no time to see who was shooting. A man had leaped to the running board and was leveling an automatic straight at Talbot's face. Gerry shook the steering wheel. The car wobbled drunkenly but the man clung on. Instantly Talbot's hand dropped to the door handle, twisted it and threw his weight against the panel. It swung wide and flipped the man from the running board. The rear wheel missed him by scant fractions of an inch.

The Hispano-Suiza was dashing at and among the scattering gunmen like a rogue elephant running amuck, its single bright eye gleaming malignantly as it swivelled here and there in response to Gerry's jerking hands on the wheel. Its two passengers could hear the snarling drone of Dave's airplane, but, for the moment, they had their own battle to fight. Their only hope lay in a swift, unceasing offensive.

"Look, Gerry!" shouted Talbot, pointing straight along the single beam of the headlight.

There, emerging from the tunnel-like road in the jungle, was an ancient Ford, bumping and reeling as it forged slowly ahead over the rough ground. And emblazoned in the white glare from Gerry's headlight were two girls and a jet-black negress. Despite the maelstrom of noise, shots and confusion, the little car headed straight across the field, its rusty radiator pointed at the idling airplane before the open hangar door.

The Hispano-Suiza slowed around at full speed, racing toward the shabby little car which was already the target for half-a-dozen guns. Twenty yards away was a man who slowly, carefully, raised a double-barrelled shotgun and aimed it at the Ford. The thundering sport car cut him down in his tracks.

The Ford came to a shuddering stop. From the other side of the field came the hammering of the machine gun and the howl of the airplane's engine. The girls sat still in their car, not knowing what to do.

"Ah, the fools!" gasped Talbot, "the brave little fools!"

The Hispano lurched around them in a whirl of dust. Gerry reached down and yanked at the emergency brake. "Jump, Talbot!" he panted. "I've got to get Joan!"

Dave sat on the edge of his seat cushion as if by so doing he could help his thundering plane onward. The air speed meter on the instrument board indicated 150 miles an hour, but the carpet of trees below moved beneath the fuselage with heart-breaking slowness. Never had time dragged so!

A Big Chance.
He saw Gerry's car burst out into the open clearing and dash headlong at the line of running men, who scattered, wheeled and blazed at it. He groaned involuntarily. If he could but nose down now and dive into that mess he could stop those men from shooting at Gerry and Talbot.

But there, straight ahead, was Joan, still on the box seat of the truck. The man, whose arm held her where she was, waved toward the idling amphibian at the hangar door. Dave saw a man leap into the boat-shaped cockpit of the waiting ship. The slowly revolving propeller churned over with grasp and threw herself to the ground. She fell and rolled over and over. The truck came to a sudden stop.

The odd-shaped rifle in the man's arms began to blink redly at the diving airplane. A neat pattern of black spots appeared in the wing, a dozen inches from Dave's head, as the sub-calibre machine gun spat out its dotted line of singing lead. And behind the blazing muzzle of the gun was Mueller's contorted face, fully visible in the glare of Gerry's headlight. The gang leader stood down at him, holding his finger tight on the trigger, spraying lead from his vibrating weapon like water from a garden hose.

The Score Evened.
Dave, staring grimly ahead, heard the bullets crack past, heard, too, the snapping impact of lead against wood and fabric. He was sharply conscious of that swarthy face behind the gun and of the need of reaching it before those bullets probed their way through and through his own body. He adjusted his control stick and pedals with meticulous care. He must not miss. A little higher, now. Not too much. Back, hard! The plane, whose tires had almost touched the ground, leaped high into the air. The right wheel swung up across the truck like a titanic pendulum. It seemed only to graze Mueller's tense body in passing, but the man was swept away in a long parabola, turning over and over in the air before he crashed to the ground. He rolled for several feet, as limp as a rag doll thrown away by a petulant child. Then he lay very still.

At the top of his zoom Dave looked over the splintered edge of his cockpit. Gerry's car was dashing back and forth on the other end of the field as if a crazy man was at its wheel. It was a swift, sleek Car of Juggernaut. He saw it cut down one man and turn after a second.

The man was swept away in a long parabola, turning and turning in the air.

ever-increasing speed. The heavy plane lumbered ahead to meet the truck.

Dave, in a frenzy of impatience, pushed against the stick, nosing his monoplane down into a head-long dive. The altimeter showed 180 miles an hour. Wind howled through wire and struts. The roar of the engine rose to an ear-splitting whine. But still the ship seemed to be dragging along as if somehow anchored to the sky.

The man who was holding Joan looked back over his shoulder. He saw Dave's diving plane and rolled backward from his seat, landing on all fours on the bouncing platform behind the driver.

He reached swiftly into the deep shadow beneath the seat. Then he stood erect and swung an odd-shaped, lumpy rifle to his shoulder.

Joan rose to her feet, twisted away from the driver's lurching of two members of the men's club. White rats were also used throughout the entertainment. Proceeds will be divided between the local lodge and the group presenting the program.

LANCASTER, Pa. — Pressing its campaign for a state fire tower in the Welsh Mountains, the Lancaster County Firemen's Association has called upon the county legislative delegation, the board of commissioners and property owners to join in the movement.

Prevalent danger of forest fires in the heavily timbered mountain section makes construction of a tower imperative, the association stated.

PAST

SECOND PERIOD

From May 12th to May 25th, inclusive, the following number of votes will be issued:
1 Year 8,000
2 Years 21,000
3 Years 50,000
4 Years 80,000
5 Years 160,000
6 Years 290,000
20,000 extra votes will be given on each year of new subscriptions turned in during Second Period.

The above schedule of votes, which is on a declining basis, WILL POSITIVELY NOT BE CHANGED during the campaign. All extra votes are in addition to the above schedule. No subscriptions will be accepted for more than six years from any candidate. A special ballot good for 100,000 extra votes will be issued on each "club" of $18.00 turned in. The subscription price of The Bristol Courier is $3.00 per year.

No extra votes for new subscriptions during the final week.

CANDIDATES, ATTENTION !

Some of the candidates the past few days, seemingly, are not taking an active part in the campaign. Accordingly, with the rules of the campaign, those candidates failing to make a cash report each week will have their names dropped from the race and will forfeit all rights to a prize and commission.

TAKE WARNING
DO NOT COMPLAIN IF YOU FAIL

SECOND PAYMENTS

Second payments on the subscriptions taken during the early part of the campaign will play a VERY IMPORTANT PART during the present vote period. You not only receive the full credit for the extended subscriptions on the biggest vote schedule, but this money applies on the 100,000 EXTRA FREE VOTE OFFER.

These are the days, too, to go right back over your list of friends and get those who are not already subscribers to The Courier to take a subscription in your favor, even though it be a small one.

You can go "over the top" and capture one of the big prizes for your very own if you make a REAL effort every day of the "home stretch."

Man Fined $25 and Costs For Fishing On Sunday

CROYDON, May 22.—A fine of $25 and costs was imposed upon Robert Pennewell, of 5927 North 12th street, Philadelphia, last evening, when he was arraigned before Squire James Laughlin, here, for hearing on a charge of fishing on Sunday.

Ten days' time was allowed for payment of the stipulated amount.

Pennewell was taken into custody by Deputy Game Warden Daniel Potter, of Newportville, at a point on the Neshaminy Creek, near Croydon on Sunday, May 19th.

Candidates Now Have Last Big Opportunity

last chance for the big votes. Promptly at ten o'clock the Courier's Campaign office will be closed. No one will be permitted to enter the campaign headquarters after that time for the purpose of turning in subscriptions or renewals on the present vote offer. Those inside at that time, however, will be waited on before the present big offer is closed forever.

Be careful in filling out your subscription stubs, always writing or printing the name of the subscriber plainly so that there will be no mistake in entering the subscription. Candidates should not neglect to sign their names to the stubs so that proper vote credit will be given. In case of "second subscription" be sure to mark stubs, marking also the amount of the first payment and when made.

Don't forget the big vote value of the six-year subscriptions. Three six-year subscriptions count you nearly two million votes now. Gather in all long-term subscriptions possible. And on top of the present big vote schedule 100,000 extra free votes are allowed every "club" of $18 turned in.

Only "Hard" Money Used In Washington's Time

Spanish peso, the silver "piece of eight," made famous in pirate yarns.

Visitors to Washington during the George Washington Bicentennial Celebration will see in the Smithsonian Institution a full display of this early paper, along with the "hard money" of the Washington Administration. About three specimens are preserved from each of the Colonies, each specimen with its characteristic "vignette" from which developed the conventional designs on the paper money of today.

The mottoes on some of these decorations sometimes expressed refreshing political candor. One three-dollar Continental bill carries the frank statement, "Exitus in dubio est." And so that the holder himself need be in no fog in the matter, an English translation was added: "This issue is in doubt." The holder was left in doubt, nevertheless, as to which issue was shaky, the War of Independence or the value of that particular bill.

As to the "hard money" that officially replaced this paper, Robert Morris was ordered by Congress in 1782 to report on the foreign coins circulating in the United States, with a plan for an American coinage. Through the efforts of Morris, Jefferson and Hamilton a mint was authorized, and in 1792, President Washington approved a bill establishing such a mint, the first in the United States, located in Philadelphia.

The smallest coin then issued was the copper half-cent, with the figure of Liberty on one side, a wreath on the other. Next came the cent, a silver half-dime, the dime, quarter, half, and dollar as we know them today. On the silver coins an eagle was placed within the wreath on the back. Indeed visitors will be struck by the fact that our metal coins of today have changed so little from these first designs.

The gold coins, by the way, the quarter-eagle, half-eagle, and eagle, took the name "eagle" from this first use of the national bird as a decoration or symbol.

Blaze Threatens House On Peter Matza Farm

A pump house was destroyed and the dwelling threatened by fire on the farm of Peter Matza, Bristol Township, yesterday afternoon at about five o'clock.

Bristol Consolidated Company quickly responded and prevented the flames in the dwelling from gaining any headway.

The fire, apparently, started on the inside of the pump house and the structure was aflame before it was discovered by neighbors. The farm is unoccupied. It was formerly occupied by Joseph Boke.

The intense heat from the pump house fire ignited the window shades in the kitchen of the dwelling, located nearby. Firemen arrived just in time to prevent total destruction of the house.

MISCELLANEOUS

BRISTOL BUILDING ASSOCIATION—New series Monday, June 1, 1931. Single and double payment shares. Do you know that cash was paid by Building Associations at Bristol and its immediate vicinity during 1930 to matured stockholders amounting to over $200,000 dollars. That in 1931 more than that amount will be paid out in cash. That you could have been one of these people had you taken out stock eleven years ago or even six years ago. That this money came to Bristol just at a time when our people needed it the most. That if you do not subscribe to stock this year you are losing another opportunity. Now is the time to subscribe. NASH

Air Commerce Regulations
Require Twin-Ignition . . .

NASH PROVIDES IT FOR MOTORING

Public carriers of the air must now be powered by motors with two spark plugs per cylinder. Section 3 of "Airworthiness Requirements of Air Commerce Regulations for Engines and Propellers" says this: "Dual Ignition Systems, with at least two spark plugs per cylinder are required on all engines with a power rating of 40 horse power or more."

The same type of power now declared mandatory for commercial aircraft, Nash engineering has provided for more than two years in Nash motor cars!

There are two spark plugs, two firing points, per cylinder, to burn the gasoline more quickly, more completely, more efficiently.

The same motor, with Twin Ignition, instead of single ignition, develops 22% more horse power, 5 miles an hour more top speed, and delivers 2 extra miles per gallon of gasoline!

Just drive a Nash Eight-90 or Eight-80, and you will agree with Nash owners, that Twin Ignition is the most desirable motor car improvement in many years!

SPORTS

"INDIES" "HIBS" GAME
ENDS IN SCORELESS TIE

(By T. M. Juno)

In one of the best games played this season, the Independents and the A. O. H. ball clubs battled to a scoreless tie last night on St. Ann's field. The fray was an old fashioned hurling duel between Wilson Holland, of the Independents, and James Mangan, of the Hibernians.

Mangan, backed by almost perfect support, was the better of the twirlers, yielding but two hits and not allowing a man to reach third base and only two to get as far as the second sack. He issued but two passes and never was in danger of being scored upon.

Holland showed his best in the pinches. He struck out ten batters and was in hot water several times. In the first inning, the "Hiboes" loaded the sacks with one out, but did not score. In the next frame they placed runners on second and third and still did not score. Again, in the third, runners were left on first and second, and in the last three cantos one man was left on base every inning. The Hibernians made five hits from the delivery of Holland, but they were very well scattered.

The Hibernians, who on last Monday scored a 5-1 victory over the Federals, again proved their defensiveness by allowing only one error to be chalked against them. On Monday they played errorless ball. A fast double-play, Thompson to Brady to Leyden, stopped a threatening Independents' rally in the second and in the following frame a leaping one-handed catch of Holland's drive by McCafferty saved a hit from being credited to the batter. There were no extra base blows in the game.

The Corson street boys filled the sacks in the first inning. Connors was passed; on a hit and run play, Brady singled past short-stop; Leyden fanned out to Pursell; Dugan was hit with a pitched ball; Thompson struck out and so did McCafferty.

In the second, the Hibernians had two left on base. With two out, Mangan reached first on Gleason's error; Connors again was passed; Brady then struck out.

Pursell singled in the Independents' second but was wiped out in a fast double-play on Massilla's roller to short.

Dugan and Thompson were credited with singles in the Hibernians' third but McCafferty and Holden fanned, ending the inning.

Morgan's single went to waste in the A. O. H. fourth. In the lower half, Romeo drew the first pass from Mangan but reached no further than first.

Parsell drew a pass from Mangan in the Independents' fifth after no one had reached first in the Hibernians' half.

Holden singled in the Hibernians' final, but could not be advanced around the sacks. In the Independents' part, Holland singled; Avella forced Holland, Thompson to Rodgers; Piazza bunted to Mangan and Avella reached second; Avella was caught napping off second and tagged out. Mangan to Thompson to Dugan to Rodgers.

Thompson starred in the game, which will be replayed at a later date.

HARRIMAN F. C. WILL OPPOSE REPUBLICAN CLUB

On Sunday afternoon at 2:30, on St. Ann's field, the newly-organized Harriman Field Club will cross bats with the strong Central Republican Club of the Trenton City League.

The locals will use "Joe" Kohler on the mound, with "Sammy" Deitrich doing the backstopping; "Larry" David will cover first; "Eddie" McDevitt at the keystone sack; "Joe" Wilkinson at third; and "Danny" McDevitt rounding out the infield, at shortstop. Cooper, Karp and Brady will patrol the outer gardens. Hirsch, Brooks, Jeffries, Hutchinson and Trott in reserve.

HARRISBURG.—This is the story of a duck that ducked just in time.

The bird was owned by James Strominger, of Lisburn, near here. For two years, Strominger observed, she laid no eggs and Strominger decided an eggless duck was something he could do without.

So the Stromingers set a date for a duck dinner. Came Mr. and Mrs. L. N. Hale to visit the Stromingers. They noticed the duck fly to a balcony on the Strominger home, then to a springhouse, where it ducked into a chimney.

Mrs. Strominger investigated. In the chimney was a nest, filled with eight duck eggs.

Entertains 36 at Card Games

YARDLEY, May 23.—Mrs. Charles Bennett and Mrs. Maurice Stradling were co-hostesses in the sixth of a series of community nurse fund card parties.

A luncheon bridge was given for 36 guests.

Mrs. Alexander Riekey received the first prize for "500" and Mrs. J. H. Lincoln, the consolation prize. Miss Helen W. Leedom received first prize for bridge and Mrs. Harry Hoffman the consolation prize.

The guests were: Mrs. Alfred A. Dancer, Mrs. Harvey Funk, Mrs. William Beener, Mrs. Phineas Starkey, Mrs. William Yardley, Jr., Mrs. William Yardley, Sr., Mrs. Samuel Yardley, Mrs. Eugene Stapler, Mrs. Charles E. Clausen, Mrs. Willard W. Wright, Mrs. Joseph Heald, Miss Sarah Stapler, Mrs. William Buckman, Miss Anna Stockton, Mrs. Jessie Black, Mrs. Anthony Van House, Mrs. Clarence Harvey, all of Yardley; Mrs. George La Rue, of Bristol; Mrs. W. A. White, of Morrisville; Mrs. William Molineaux, Mrs. Fred Breece, Mrs. Elmer Leedom, Mrs. Carl Hahn, Mrs. Jesse Cutler.

Wanted—Assistant Breeders

I wish to place some German Shepherd puppies and young stock with families that like dogs well enough to be interested in their development. When old enough to be shown at the A. K. C. shows, arrangements will be made regarding prize money, breeding, etc. For information, write to: Alexander Kennels, Box 96, Rydal, Pa.

Rowing's Dark Horses

By HARDIN BURNLEY

"MIKE" MURPHY--- WHO COACHES THE WISCONSIN EIGHT---A PERENNIAL DARK HORSE AT POUGHKEEPSIE!

INTERCOLLEGIATE rowing, like all other races, has its dark horses which win quite unexpectedly every now and then.

Usually entries tagged as such seldom come through so, when referring to Harvard and Wisconsin among 1931 ebon equines, this Sport Bug may be accused later of fixing a raceboat jinx on the Cantabrigians and the Badgers. However, both those varsity eights are able to surprise critics this year—Harvard on the Thames against Yale, and Wisconsin at Poughkeepsie.

Not since 1927 has Harvard beaten Yale in their major eight-oared event on the Thames. In fact, in the past ten years that was the lone time Old John out-rowed Old Eli. Only two victories since the end of the war, and yet, in the 68 duels between the ancient rivals, Harvard has 31 triumphs to Yale's 37!

This year, the Blue now looms as distinctly superior to the Crimson, Coach Ed Leader apparently having another one of his great crews; but Harvard is not without hope. Up at Cambridge on the Charles River, Coach "Charley" Whiteside is not broadcasting, yet it is known that he is building a formidable varsity with much help from last year's excellent freshman boat.

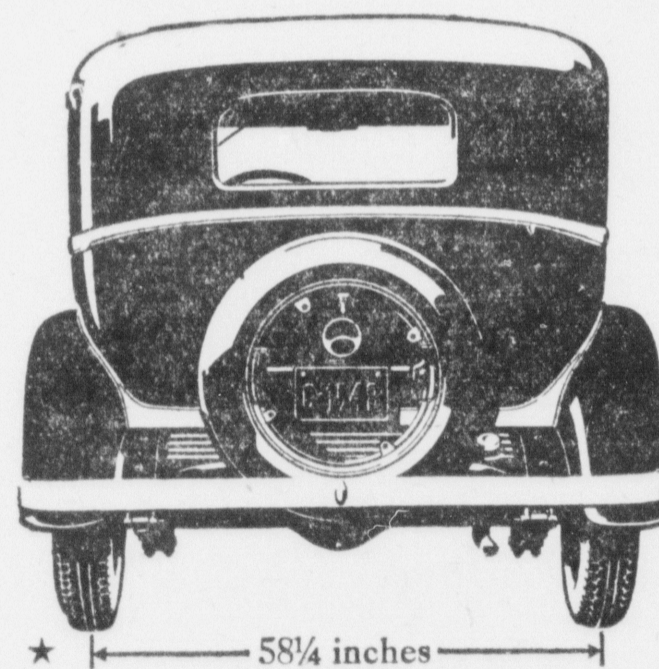

Harvard men are yearning for a Thames victory over Yale, more so than for anything else in sports.

They would revive the glories of 1908-13 when for six successive years the Crimson waved above the Blue on the historic river near New London, Conn. But the best that can be said now is, their chances are dark—decidedly so.

As to Wisconsin, its varsity had been second, four times and third three in the Poughkeepsie Regatta since 1900. To finish among the first three in that Hudson River classic is distinction, but what the Badgers desire most is to capture a blue ribbon first. It seems almost impossible, but Coach "Mike" Murphy's first crew is working with that in view. Wisconsin's chances are about as good as those of Harvard against Yale.
